San Jose International Airport (SJC) is Silicon Valley's airport, serving nearly 4 million people. The Airport's completion of a $1.3 billion modernization project in June 2010 has made it one of the greenest, most modern business airports for visitors and the first in the nation to be awarded LEED Silver certification.

SJC has state-of-the-art TSA security check-point screening technology and the most advanced baggage screening in the nation. Lounges are large and feature more comfortable seats with power outlets and USB ports in the armrests, free high-speed Internet and several award-winning public art installations. Most of the 40 shops and restaurants are new, with more than half having a local or regional connection, giving the experience a special local flavor. Eco-aware travelers will be happy to know that SJC has extensive sustainable operations.
